The project will allow thousands of children to benefit from high quality learning materials adapted to the environment and the Haitian reality.

INFRASTRUCTURE SECTOR

UNOPS has put in place the Rural Access Index (RAI), which is a key index in the transportation sector developed by the World Bank in order to put emphasis on the critical role of access and mobility in reducing poverty for the developing countries. This index shows that 3.2 M of Haitians living in rural areas do not have a remote access to adequate roads at any time leading to a department chief-town, representing 61% of the rural population as a whole.

In 2017, UNOPS began the construction of school and clinic for the Congregation of Sisters of Ste Anne at Fort National, as well as the rehabilitation of secondary roads in the departments of Grand'Anse and South in partnership with the Ministry of Public Works and the World Bank. Thanks to its experience in Haiti and worldwide, UNOPS intends to help the underprivileged communities in the rural areas where the poverty did not change this last 12 years and count on its partners to develop the rural road network, the agricultural potential and the associated infrastructures and services.
